Answer key – Some and Any, Countable and Uncountable Nouns – Worksheet 1

Exercise 1: Countable or uncountable?

1. countable
We can count eggs: one egg, two eggs.
2. uncountable
We can't say 'two milks'; milk is uncountable.
3. countable
We can count bananas: one banana, three bananas.
4. uncountable
Rice has no plural form; it is uncountable.
5. countable
We can count chairs: one chair, four chairs.
6. uncountable
We say 'some bread', not 'a bread' or 'breads'.

Exercise 2: Choose the right word

7. an
We use an before a singular countable noun that starts with a vowel sound.
8. some
We use some with uncountable nouns in positive sentences.
9. any
We use any in negative sentences.
10. any
We use any in questions.
11. a
We use a before a singular countable noun that starts with a consonant sound.
12. some
We use some with plural nouns in positive sentences.
13. some
We use some when we ask for something politely.

Exercise 3: Some or any?

14. any
Isn't is negative, so we use any.
15. some
This is a positive sentence, so we use some.
16. any
This is a question, so we use any.
17. some
This is a positive sentence, so we use some.
18. any
Doesn't is negative, so we use any.
19. some
We use some in polite requests, even in questions.
20. any
This is a normal question, so we use any.

Exercise 4: Negatives and questions

21. There isn't any milk in the glass.
In negatives, some changes to any.
22. Are there any books on the desk?
In questions, we put are first and change some to any.
23. I don't have any money.
We use don't have + any for negatives.
24. Does she have any cats?
With she, the question uses does + have, and some changes to any.
25. We don't need any eggs.
We use don't + verb + any for negatives.
26. Is there any water in the bottle?
In questions, we put is first and change some to any.

Exercise 5: Find the mistake

27. There are some apples on the table.
This is a positive sentence, so we use some.
28. I don't have any homework today.
In negative sentences, we use any.
29. I'd like some bread, please.
Bread is uncountable, so we use some, not a.
30. There is some bread in the kitchen.
Uncountable nouns have no plural -s.
31. Is there any milk in the fridge?
Milk is uncountable, so we use is there, not are there.
32. She has two oranges.
Countable nouns need -s in the plural.
33. I have a banana.
Banana starts with a consonant sound, so we use a.

Exercise 6: Make sentences

34. Is there any juice?

Questions with there start with is or are.

35. I have some bananas.

Positive sentence: subject + verb + some + noun.

36. We don't have any sugar.

Negative sentence: subject + don't + verb + any + noun.

37. Are there any chairs?

Chairs is plural, so the question starts with are there.

38. There is some cheese on the plate.

Cheese is uncountable, so we use there is + some.

39. Do you have any brothers?

Question: do + subject + have + any + noun.

Notes for teachers: Start by sorting real classroom or food objects into countable and uncountable groups before doing Exercise 1. Typical mistakes are adding -s to uncountable nouns (breads), using a with uncountable nouns (a bread) and using some in negatives. Point out that we use some in requests and offers (Can I have some tea?). As a follow-up, ask pairs to describe what is and isn't in their fridge at home using some and any.
