My First Week in a New City

Hi, I'm Daniel. Last month, my family moved from a small village to a big city. Before we left, I felt really nervous. I was worried about my new school, and I was sad to leave my friends.

On my first day, I was very shy. I didn't talk to anyone in the morning, and at lunch I sat alone. I felt lonely and a bit homesick. Then a girl called Mei sat next to me. She smiled and asked, "Are you new here?" I was surprised because she was so friendly.

Mei showed me the library and the sports hall. After school, we played basketball with her friends. It was great fun, and I laughed a lot. When I got home, my dad asked, "How was your day?" I said, "Better than I expected!"

Now I'm really happy here. I still miss my old friends, but we chat online every weekend. I'm also excited because next month Mei and I are going to join the school music club.

Notes for teachers: Use Part 1 as a warm-up or quick check of core feeling words, then move on to the collocation and reading sections. The test targets typical A2 errors such as confusing bored/boring and surprised/surprising, using the wrong preposition after afraid, worried and angry, and mixing up feel and make. As a follow-up, ask learners to write five sentences about times they felt nervous, proud, bored, surprised or homesick.
